The Tao Te Ching, also known as Tao Te Ching or Dao De Jing, is a key text in Taoism, often considered one of the four great works of classic literature. It is attributed to Laozi, also known as Lao Tzu, and was compiled around the 3rd century BCE.

The Tao Te Ching consists of eighty-one hexagrams, each containing a verse of four characters. It is a philosophical and moral text that delivers a treatise on how to live in the world with goodness and integrity. The text is translated into many languages, with English versions being particularly common.

The book is short, around 5,000 Chinese characters, and it is inscribed in its 81 verses. It is often said that the text is a treatise on how to live in the world with goodness and integrity.

One of its central themes is the concept of Tao, which can be translated as 'the way' or 'the path'. This concept is often characterized as the supreme principle from which all things originate. The Tao Te Ching enunciates the importance of avoiding interference with nature and the forces of the universe, and it promotes living in harmony with the Tao.

The text also emphasizes the importance of simplicity and non-action (wu wei), and it advises against the accumulation of knowledge and material wealth. Instead, it advocates for living in accordance with the Tao, which is seen as a cosmic force that governs all things.

The Tao Te Ching has been translated and interpreted by many scholars and interpreters over the centuries, and it continues to be studied and debated by students of philosophy, religion, and literature around the world.
