Pyramids are some of the most impressive structures built by humans in ancient times. Many of the pyramids still survive today and among the most ancient are the pyramids of Giza in Egypt. The Great Pyramid of Giza, the largest of the three pyramids at Giza, stands over 480 feet tall. From a distance, it is quite impressive, and close up it is even more so, considering how it was constructed without the use of modern technology.

The pyramids were built from stone blocks and were used as tombs for pharaohs and their consorts. The Great Pyramid contains over 2 million stone blocks that weigh up to 2.5 tons each. The workers who constructed the pyramids were not common laborers; they were highly skilled and experienced craftsmen.

The pyramids were built during the Old Kingdom period of ancient Egypt, from around 2600 to 2100 BCE. The pharaohs who ruled during this period were known for their grandiose and ambitious building projects. The pyramids were constructed as part of these projects, and they served as tombs for the pharaohs and their consorts.

The pyramids were also used as symbols of power and authority. The pharaohs were believed to be the children of the gods, and the pyramids were built to reflect this. The curved shapes of the pyramids were also associated with the sun, and the pyramids were built to symbolize the sun's journey through the sky.

The pyramids were also used as symbols of the afterlife. The pharaohs believed that their spirits would live on in the afterlife, and the pyramids were built to provide a place for them to live. The pyramids were also used as symbols of the pharaohs' power and authority in the afterlife.

The pyramids were built using a combination of stone, mud brick, and sandstone. The stones were cut and shaped at the quarry and then transported to the construction site. The workers were skilled in using the stone tools and techniques of the day. The mud brick and sandstone were used to build the lower levels of the pyramids.
